Excerpt from Accounting for Property, and Its Uses: Center for South and Southeast Asia Studies, University of California, Berkeley, California 94720 This presentation of elementary accounting attempts to divide the subject into two parts. The first part presents principles and procedures used to account for assets and for the uses made of these assets. While some reference to liabilities and other equities is necessary, this is placed in background. The second part presents principles and procedures used to account for liabilities and other equities. Liabilities and ownership claims are presented primarily as sources of assets. It is believed that if a complete balance sheet approach is emphasized that there may be failure to place proper emphasis on other problems and procedures which the student will find more immediately useful. Although this scheme of presentation has not had the widest use, it has had the approval of some of the foremost accounting teachers. The teaching of accounting in some of the economically less developed countries makes it more necessary than ever to inquire into the fundamental nature of the...
