Not illustrated. 1865 Excerpt: . carried weightier cares, had no room for such thoughts, the young man brooded over and disliked them. By what reprisals should he resent this covert impertinence? was the question that very often recurred to him. Should he affect to undervalue the place, and all the art treasures? Should he throw out dark hints of how much these tasteful toys might realise at a sale? Should he speculate vaguely on what the Castle would become, if, instead of a show-house, it were to be made what he would call habitable? Or, last of all, what tone should he assume towards Mademoiselle--should he slight her, or make love to her? In these self-discussions he fell asleep at last. Long before any of his guests were awake the next morning, Sir Within had called for his writing-desk. It was a passion of his to ask for his writing materials before he was up. It smacked of old times, when, remembering something that might very well have been forgotten, he would dash off a few smart lines to a minister or a secretary, with reference to the brief conversation with which your Excellency honoured me yesterday. He was an adept in little notes; he knew how to throw off those small evasive terms which pass for epigrams, and give a sort of glitter to a style that was about as real as a theatrical costume. He had suddenly bethought him of a case for the exercise of his high...
